CONSERVATION OF ENERGY RESOURCES

Energy is a basic requirement for economic development. Every sector of the national economy - agriculture, industry, transport, commercial and domestic - needs inputs of energy. The economic development plans implemented since independence necessarily required increasing amounts of energy to remain operational. As a result, consumption of energy in all forms has been steadily rising all over the country. In this background, there is an urgent need to develop a sustainable path of energy development. Promotion of energy conservation and increased use of renewable energy sources are the twin planks of sustainable energy. India is presently one of the least energy efficient countries in the world. We have to adopt a cautious approach for the judicious use of our limited energy resources. For example, as concerned citizens we can do our bit by using public transport systems instead of individual vehicles; switching off electricity when not in use, using power-saving devices and using non-conventional sources of energy. At last "Energy Saved is energy produced"

The manufacturing sector is considered as the backbone of development in general and economic development in particular mainly because of the following reasons:

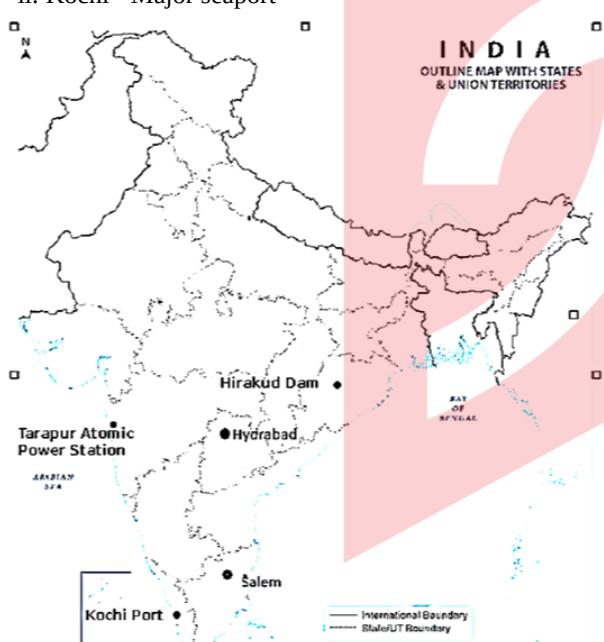

- i. Modernising the manufacturing sector contributes to modernising agriculture, which is regarded as the foundation of our economy. Giving people jobs in the secondary and tertiary industries also lessens their excessive reliance on agricultural income.
- ii. Industrial development is a precondition for the eradication of unemployment and poverty in our country. This was the main philosophy behind public sector industries and joint sector ventures in India.
- iii. The export of manufactured goods expands trade and commerce and brings in much-needed foreign exchange.
- iv. Countries that transform their raw materials into a wide variety of furnished goods of a higher value are prosperous.
- v. Hence, India's prosperity lies in increasing and diversifying its manufacturing industries at a faster phase. It can also be said that the economic strength of a country is measured by the development of manufacturing industries.

18. i. Sustainable energy is crucial for sustainable development because it ensures that the current energy needs are met without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own energy needs. It promotes long-term economic growth and environmental preservation.

ii. Consumption of energy is increasing throughout India due to the implementation of economic development plans that demand higher energy inputs across various sectors such as agriculture, industry, transport, and domestic usage.

iii. This phrase emphasizes the importance of energy conservation. It means that by reducing energy wastage and using energy efficiently, we essentially generate additional energy resources without actually increasing energy production. When we save energy through practices like using public transport, turning off lights when not in use, or utilizing power-saving devices, we conserve energy resources, making them available for other purposes, effectively producing energy that would otherwise be wasted.

OR

In order to overcome the challenges in society, political parties need to be reformed. The following steps should be taken to reform the political parties. There are many suggestions made to reform political parties:

- i. A law should be made to regulate the internal affairs of political parties. It should be made compulsory for political parties to maintain a register of its members, to follow their own constitution, to have an independent authority, to act as a judge in case of party disputes, and to hold open elections to the highest posts.
- ii. It should be made mandatory for political parties to give a minimum number of tickets, about one-third, to women candidates. Similarly, there should be a quota for women in the decision-making bodies of the party.
- iii. There should be state funding of elections. The government should give parties money to support their election expenses. This support could be given in kind: petrol, paper, telephone, etc. Or it could be given in cash on the basis of the votes secured by the party in the last election.
- iv. People can put pressure on political parties. This can be done through petitions, publicity and agitations. Ordinary citizens, pressure groups and movements and the media can play an important role in this.
- v. People wanting the reforms must participate actively in politics and join political parties. It is difficult to reform politics if ordinary citizens do not take part in it and simply criticise it from the outside. The problem of bad politics can be solved by more and better politics. i. The history of developed countries reveals a general pattern of development in their economic structure. In the initial stages of development, the primary sector was the most important sector of economic activity and predominantly contributed to GDP and held most of the employment. As the methods of farming changed and agriculture sector began to prosper, people began to take up other activities. When agricultural activities increased there was a need for industrialisation and gradually Industrial sectors dominated the economy.

ii. Much of the worker's shifts to Industrial sector but Primary productivity did not hamper as Industrial sector produced much-sophisticated instruments and inputs that increased the productivity and filled the gap of loss of workforce. New methods of manufacturing were introduced, factories came up and started expanding. The secondary sector gradually became the most important in total production and employment.

iii. With the development of areas like transport and administration, the service sector kept on growing. In the past 100 years, there has been a shift from the secondary to the tertiary sector in developed countries. The service sector has become the most important in terms of total production and employment without disturbing the production and productivity of the other two sectors. This is the general pattern observed in developed countries.

So, it is seen that the central tendency of the economic structure has been shifting from Primary to Secondary and finally to the Tertiary sector in developed countries. Similarly, almost all the developing countries are following the same path but may be at a different pace.
